INDUCTION

Although new students are automatically members of Shalom, Induction is a time to formally recognize them as new members of Shalom.

All new students have seeret sisters who give them some kind of present for 4 days starting on a Monday. On Thursday, the fourth day, we have our Induction ceremony where secret sisters are revealed and carnations are given.

AFTER INDUCTION, WE HAD OUR FIRST CANDLEPASSING.

on Channel 7 (the Lamoni channel) last Sunday (they'll let anything on TV these days, but Lamoni still has no MTV).

I don't think I'm the only one going through drastic changes. Others have made a huge alteration in beverage selection. Anticipating the incredibly recent trend of mineral water sales, the Swarm Inn has started selling Chapelle. It was a big jump for me to make the called. I answer, "It depends", the most universal and reasonable attempt to get the instructor to restate the question.

It's a tough situation to have to wait so long for spring break. Maybe I'll get on the phone and arrange for Conference to be earlier next time. I'm sure they'd consider it. Until then, have a fun-filled, safe spring break.

Presidential Candidates Part 7 of 8
Pat Buchanan Saves George Bush From David Duke

Bill Russell
Guest Writer

George Bush may not realize it or appreciate it, but Pat Buchanan has done the President a big favor by challenging him in the Republican primaries. While Buchanan's tendency to siphon off about 30 percent of the vote in Republican primaries is an embarrassment for Bush, it has done two things that help the President. One is something that has been pointed out from time to time by the pundits, and that is, Buchanan has given the White House a wake up call very early in the Presidential race. Bush now realizes that about one-third of his fellow Republicans are not happy with him. But he has a lot of time—from now until November—to mend fences with disgruntled members of the Grand Old Party.

But a lesser noticed favor that Buchanan has done for Bush is to prevent David Duke from embarrassing the Republican Party in the presidential primaries. The right wing of the Republican Party has never trusted George Bush. Buchanan has provided a respectable alternative for the right wing of the party to support. Had Buchanan not run, Duke would have ben the only well-known challenger to Bush on the Republican ballot in the recent primaries. While Duke would not likely have gotten as many votes as Buchanan, it is reasonable to believe that he would have gotten a handsome protest vote. In primaries where Buchanan got over thirty percent of the Republican votes, Duke would likely have gotten at least twenty percent. To have the former Grand Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan receiving a significant vote against an incumbent President in his own party's primary would have embarrassed the party.

Those who might doubt that Duke would have done that well might recall that he received 60 percent of the white vote in Louisiana in the 1990 race against an established, respected Senator, Bennett Johnston. Then last Fall he received 55 percent of the white vote for Governor when he ran against former Governor Edwin Edwards. Black Louisianans saved the state and the Republican Party from having Duke represent them as Governor or United States Senator.

Duke claims to have shed the racism and anti-Semitism of his past. He articulates positions many Republican in general and George Bush in particular are noted for. Indeed, the Republican Party since the Nixon Presidency has often pandered to the fears of white racists in American. Nixon, Reagan, and Bush have taken positions that on their face are not racist, like "law and order," anti-welfare, anti-affirmative action, anti-quotas, and generally arguing that government is too big and has no business trying to solve social problems. In other words, those who have been left out can stay that way. Don't expect the government to care or to help.

It is no accident that many anti-Black Southern Democrats, like Strom Thurmond and, yes, David Duke, have switched from the Democratic Party to the Republican party. In the last two decades the Southern Democrats have taken significant strides away from their racist past, while the national Republican party has focused on issues that are not racist on the surface, but often mask a subtle racism beneath. That is not to say that persons are bigots if they oppose all tax increases, affirmative action, quotas, welfare, and big government generally, and favor a "get tough" approach to crime even if it means sacrificing civil liberties. There are persons of good will who are legitimately conservative on these issues for non-racist reasons.

But unfortunately the bigots happen to occupy the same ground. It is often difficult to tell them apart. And thus it would have been very embarrassing for George Bush if he had to face a weekly protest vote by David Duke. He might have been forced to show us how he is different from Duke. Bush has not used the "bully pulpit" that his office provides for a President who wants to exercise moral leadership on an issue like civil rights. He has been strangely silent. I find it very difficult to distinguish between the two men on the issues. Show us how it ain't so, George!
